- Oklahoma City National Memorial & Museum- Oklahoma City, OK

Visitors to the Oklahoma City National Memorial & Museum experience the horror of the April 19, 1995 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal building and then see the hope and resilience of a city and nation. The experience starts on the morning of April 19th with a look at the normalcy that was underway in Oklahoma City prior to the infamous event. Then visitors enter a recreated hearing room from the Water Resources Board near the Federal Building where the only known recording of the bombing was accidentally recorded during the hearing. Hear the explosion rock the room and then when the doors open, enter the chaos of the moments after the explosion in downtown Oklahoma City. Watch actual news footage and wander through artifacts found among the rubble. Watch video accounts of the bombing, those lost and the heroes who risked life and limb to help the injured. Other exhibits include a display of photos and personal effects of those lost in the bombing, the detective process that solved the case, the trial and the healing of Oklahoma City. Visit the incredibly breathtaking outdoor Memorial, a 3.3-acre sanctuary visited by more than half a million people annually. The grounds are open both day and night and the view is inspiring and different depending on when the Memorial is viewed. The field of empty chairs represents each person lost. The Gates of Time surround the moment, 9:02 a.m., when the innocence of Oklahoma City was lost. Other Memorial elements include the reflecting pond and the survivor tree that somehow lived through the blast.

In 1899, the Territorial Legislature of the future state of Oklahoma mandated the founding of a natural history museum on the campus of the University of the Territory of Oklahoma in Norman, now the University of Oklahoma. Since that time, the existing museum has had a long and distinguished history, acquiring over 7 million objects that belong to the people of the state of Oklahoma. The curators and staff of the museum conduct scientific investigations to preserve and develop a greater understanding and appreciation of natural resources and human cultural heritage; they develop exhibitions and conduct educational programs that illustrate, interpret, and explain the natural history of the state and region to bring a greater understanding of our world to the people of Oklahoma and others. On May 1, 2000, the museum opened its doors to a new century. Over 4 billion years of Oklahoma's natural history can be seen in a 198,000 square foot facility. Five galleries feature thousands of artifacts in 50,000 square feet of exhibit space. Visitors can immerse themselves in the fascinating natural and cultural history of Oklahoma.
